

The Research Institute for Home Care is a 501(c)(3) foundation focused on improving access to and delivery of health care in the home. It funds and promotes research to inform policy and identify best practices and patient care models. The result of this work helps to expand access to and delivery of health care in the home.

OUR COMMITMENT TO HOME CARE

▶ Advancing Care Through Research and Innovation

As the only foundation solely dedicated to building the evidence-base for home health, hospice, and home care, the Institute funds high-quality research and initiatives to improve patient care and inform policy development, as well as demonstrate the full value of care in the home to payers, providers, policymakers, and patients. In identifying and funding new and crucial areas of study, the Institute is paving the way in establishing a solid and vitally important evidence base in home care.

As a result of our work, we have made significant changes to how care at home is delivered. Some of our recent research projects include:

- “Current practices of family caregiver training during home health care: A qualitative study”
- “Exploration of the Value and Role of Home Health Care in Medicare Advantage”
- Annual Home Health Chartbook
- New Hospice Chartbook

UPCOMING

- New hospice research with the National Alliance for Care at Home and NORC
- PhD dissertation grants

“We must reinvest in the knowledge base to drive forward home-based care.”

▶ Incubating the Next Generation of Home Care Research

The Institute considers sponsoring a wide range of studies that inform clinical and policy areas. This includes qualitative, quantitative, clinical trials, observational studies, prospective, and retrospective studies. We prioritize research which seeks to improve the future of home care delivery through payment and delivery reform, patient-and person-centered care, technology, the home care workforce, and clinical innovation.

▶ Building Partnerships

The Institute partners and collaborates on research and education programs with other organizations in health care to promote and advance quality and innovation.

▶ Expanding Our Scope of Home Care

In response to a rapidly changing home care landscape, the Institute takes a broad view of care in the home. It includes those services that allow someone to remain in the place they call home. This may include community-based services, skilled nursing care, hospice and palliative care, home-based medical care, and other professional support services that help keep people safe, healthy, and comfortable in their homes.
